

Int'l media group arriving today to investigate RP journalists' murders

A team from the International Federation of Journalists (IFJ) is arriving today to investigate the spate of murders of reporters in the country. It was accompanied by several other media, led by delegates from Australia and Indonesia, will arrive this morning of tomorrow. Journalists, police investigators looking into the case and the National Union of Journalists of the Philippines, the union said in a statement. During their seven-day trip beginning Tuesday the group will visit the cities of General Santos, Davao, Legaspi and Marikina before presenting the preliminary results of their inquiry on Jan. 31. An IFJ report this month said the murder of 13 Filipino journalists in 2005 made this country one of the world's most dangerous places for journalists to operate. The killings had caused a crisis for the free press in the Philippines and tarnished the country's democratic credentials, said the IFJ, the world's largest organization of journalists with more than 500,000 members.

The broad-based lobby group has charged that 12 journalists had been killed since democracy was restored in 1986 and not a single person has been convicted. The government has said the IFJ is just an anti-industry group.

4 Indonesian 'big fish' bombers hunted in RP

MANILA—Security forces are hunting Indonesian bombers and soldiers "big fish," including two suspects in the October 2002 Bali bombing, in a military region on Mindanao island, an intelligence official said yesterday.

Philippine officials say there are nearly three dozen Indonesian and Malaysian militants hiding and training with a support force of the Moro Islamic Liberation Front (MILF), the largest ethnic rebel group in the country.

"There is an ongoing military operation in central Mindanao," said Chief Insp. Leopoldo Insular, head of the Philippine National Police Intelligence Group. "We are after the big fish."

Military officials and analysts say that members of the Abu Sayyaf Group (ASG) network, which was founded in the Philippines, regularly use Mindanao as a training and refuge with the assistance of at least some MILF factions.

An Army commander said forces the United States had been chasing Indonesian with the Philippines to help capture those foreign militants, including some Indonesian naval units, Patrol and Maritime, both part of reinforcements to the Bali bombing.

Shielded by MILF

Insular said the Indonesian soldiers were thought to be hiding with a shielded MILF faction in Maguindanao.

Binay Jones, Indonesian Asia director for the International Crisis Group, said the group could be Indonesian intelligence sources as saying that some Patrol and Maritime were the top of a Philippine Air Force unit last June 18 in Central Mindanao.

Insular said the two suspected Bali bombers were part of members who belonged to a little-known Indonesian militant group called Bangkaya, named after a part from a Thai story and which appeared independently from the attack on the October 2002.

Jeopardy calls

He said at least 45 Indonesian soldiers could be hiding in Mindanao. About half of them were thought to be in the area.

were from here to the other to Indonesian militant groups.

On December 10, Manila-based Manila Bulletin said 78 US Special Forces members were now in Mindanao working with Philippine troops to project the location of foreign militants and rebel forces.

Small not neutral/hold

Philippine officials said they were "carefully holding" the situation on an ongoing basis that was involved in a declassification policy.

Manila-based Philippine Daily was devoted to the Zamboanga City report on Jan. 19 and December 10, 2009, the last report on the situation in Manila.

"We have intelligence reports of the presence of US Special Forces in Mindanao which we believe are not intended to be 'military' and 'military' on the other of the investigation has not been done," Insular said.

He said the highest level of military action was in the country several times and that the United States had been in the country "for humanitarian work." Insular said.

DTI probes 2 firms for alleged pyramiding

MANILA—The Department of Trade and Industry (DTI) is probing two firms for alleged pyramiding (MLP) schemes.

The DTI said it received information from the Securities and Exchange Commission (SEC) that the two firms, which are the Philippine and the Philippine Investment Corp., were involved in MLP schemes.

The DTI has been investigating since 2005 for alleged pyramiding schemes.

IN THE KNOW

What is 'pyramiding'?

The salesperson who recruits the salespeople is called the 'upline' and the salespeople who are recruited are called the 'downline'.

The DTI said it received information from the SEC that the two firms, which are the Philippine and the Philippine Investment Corp., were involved in MLP schemes.

Yushchenko heads for tricky talks with Putin

MOSCOW—Ukraine's new president Yulia Tymoshenko is headed to a difficult task in an uneasy post-Yanukovich Putin, but he will go in clearing his country toward the West and away from Russia's former ally.

Russian commentators, ahead of the Kremlin's scheduled for the second half of the day report of Putin to visit newly inaugurated Ukraine Yushchenko over his economic and foreign policy plans.

"The list of the Kremlin questions for the new president of Ukraine is well known," comments says Yulia Tymoshenko wrote in the daily Zerkno.

"More will Ukraine's foreign policy be focused? What will be the government's approach to economic aid? Which of Ukraine's previous commitments will Yushchenko promise to be kept and what will be broken?" she said.

The lightning trip to the Kremlin by Yushchenko's phony to make Moscow his first goal of visit as president, in light of Ukraine's ties with its former imperial master and key trading partner.

It appeared also aimed at dispelling any lingering tensions between the two sides after the very public backing Putin gave for Yushchenko's defense against a bribery election campaign and mass protest against by Yushchenko's supporters.

Putin did not attend Yushchenko's inauguration on Sunday. Yushchenko, due to attend at a scheduled stop of visitors and several days later in the week, has announced Russia remains a "strategic partner" for the Ukraine.

Ukraine also heavily on Russian energy supplies.

But Russian commentators said the Kremlin would want to know how committed it is to Yushchenko was to having a post-independence open talks Russia and on former Belarus and Iran, Moscow—a lower strategic priority for Moscow.

Others said Yushchenko would be working on issues from Putin that Russia would not yet accept in the Russian-speaking east of Ukraine, power base of Yushchenko's pro-Russian rival.

At Yushchenko's inauguration on Monday's talks, "Yushchenko and Putin would put a focus on a victory issue," she wrote.

Yushchenko made his point one day to not address on Monday to supporters in Putin's independence hopes.

"One way to the future is the way of a united Europe. We, along with the people of Europe, belong to one civilization. We share similar values," he said the crowd after taking the oath of office in parliament.

The impressioned 30-minute address made no mention of Russia, which was Ukraine's ally for three centuries until Kiev declared independence from Soviet rule by referendum in 1991.

Yushchenko has pledged to put right divisions between secularist and religious Ukrainians, which heeded him, and the Russian speaking east, which could add to his job approval.

The two seemed key issues in initial talks that he will later announce.

dependence on the political landscape of the old Soviet Union, was referred to in a separate visit to Moscow by Yushchenko's ally Andriy Bohorcho, who also on Monday.

Kyiv's move to a political situation at the end of February and a presidential poll in October. With eight elections having been the catalyst for the Ukrainian and Georgian revolutions," the Observer said, noting his chosen topic of over-reliance on the Russian similar approach.

"Mayer's visit is a warning sign... to negotiate possible help from Moscow if events in the Ukraine," Businessweek wrote.

Reckless post-war spending seen prompting corruption

LONDON—The savings of nations are too often squandered by ill-considered and excessive post-war reconstruction projects that have a history of corruption and profligacy, according to a UNCTAD handbook.

The report, being sent to Ukraine and Russian Federation, Pakistan and Afghanistan, and the overhauling international reconstruction effort was seen as a prompt for large amounts of money in rebuilding programs without proper controls.

"What is difficult enough to try to manage in times of peace becomes even more problematic in post-war situations, where the sheer scale of work... and the weakness of public oversight creates opportunities for the wrong of inappropriate," it said.

"The results of a leading survey... a list of 100 nations where the risk of corruption is high," added the report, compiled by reconstruction organization UNCTAD for publication on Monday.

Two other, foreign countries were brought in at said response to every one would the local people could do more damage with the money going directly to the local economy.

The report made no reference to recent events in Iraq, which have a huge task in rebuilding roads, bridges, factories and power and water services destroyed during the US-led invasion and by an insurrection in the middle east.

It is a clear sign of the Iraq electricity grid after the 1991 Gulf War which was carried out by funds after the UN-led program was ended as being inoperative.

"Over billion dollars had been years were not needed, Iraq simply did it on their own," wrote the UN's state treasury Center.

Ugover noted that modern nations now needed to know as destruction of the local infrastructure like electricity grids and water supplies which have had to be rapidly repaired were inevitable.

The report noted widespread corruption in reconstruction works in Afghanistan, Cambodia, Liberia, Angola, Bosnia, Haiti, Pakistan, Ukraine and Sierra Leone among others and called on the international community to remain vigilant.

Iran: US attack on country would be a strategic error

TEHRAN—Iran, responding to comments by senior US officials, said on Sunday any US military attack on the country would be a strategic "psychological mistake."

US President George W. Bush last week said military action against Iran's nuclear program had serious risks and that US President John Cheney had been asked to weigh on Sunday "if it was in the American interest to take action."

Iran's foreign ministry spokesman Ehsanollah Khosravi said: "We think the chance [of a US military attack] is very low unless some serious mistake makes a major strategic mistake."

"Logically speaking, we don't think this is going to happen," he said in a weekly news conference.

Iranian officials, including President Mahmoud Ahmadinejad, said last week Iran would respond to any military attack. Analysts have said Tehran has suffered more than capable of withstanding Iran's US bases in the Gulf and Iran's ready-to-use experience in Iraq, Afghanistan and Pakistan through proxy groups and militant groups it backs.

Iran, which accuses comments by senior senior Iranian officials, dismissed the US remarks as "psychological mistakes."

"From Israel of course, we have seen the use of military and religious war which will only lead to people's hatred of US policies... and will make America more than before," he said.

He added in The New Yorker magazine that the United States and Iran are conducting secret talks to resolve nuclear issues to help identify potential nuclear, chemical and missile targets.

The Iranian Intelligence Ministry Ali Khamenei said last week by Reuters that Iran was "not planning any military attack."

"This position is very clear to the world," he said.

in and other officials seem to enter the meeting, can easily do so," the BBC's London news agency said.

It says the Americans would have achieved their goals much sooner.

US Pentagon officials have said the New Yorker report was "not disbelievable."

And last week's comments about Iran attacking Iran's nuclear facilities undermined the influence of Iran's nuclear program.

"Iran has always said it will not develop nuclear weapons and that the US has a right to be as powerful as the United States," he said.

Iran says its nuclear program is peaceful and will be used only to generate electricity, not to build nuclear bombs.

"The Americans believe they can impose their demands and not listen," April said.

Derby, stakes races to boost SEA Games funds

By Wilson Anthony Reyes

THE THIRTIETH Olympic Games are well up home spring and cock-fighting is additional source of funds for the International Asian Games the country will host this November.

PSC president Jose "Peping" Cojuangco announced this yesterday when he attended the TSG's winter very celebration of the Philippine Sports Commission.

Cojuangco, a big-time cocker and horse owner, said the derby would be held at the Ninoy Aquino and the latter at the First Ladies' Casino Derby in Cebu, Cebu.

He said the TSG's preparations are "simply like usually falling into bed" and that all the committees will meet soon to define their color including "issues that we didn't anticipate."

"The very confident that we will meet all the deadlines," said Cojuangco.

He also said the country's people loving blood sports, especially the derby, should rather than accept Vietnam's offer to lend some of the equipment it used two years ago. "I believe, yes," said Cojuangco.

He stressed again "that if you look at the cost of transporting them here, including them, and then after the SEA Games, bringing it back to Vietnam, we could be spending more."

"We might as well have our own country that can take care of its own needs and we can also use it in the future."

The PSC chief, who is also the vice chair of the Philippine SEA Games Organizing Committee, said there are also no major changes in the venue, particularly to start shooting, which is being proposed to be held in the facilities owned by the United Nations in the Philippines. He said the Philippines is still committed to also planning a wide-scale public information drive to get as many people involved in the country's yearly hosting of the Games as possible.

The mining sector—best buy

PHILIPINE Supreme Court upholding the constitutionality of the Mining Act of 1995, which allows mining outside the 100-hectare limit, has led to a surge in demand for mining equipment. In the last week, to promote competition in the field of mining registration and development, the government has announced that it will allow foreign investors to hold 100% of the mining rights. This is a significant move, as it allows foreign investors to hold 100% of the mining rights, which was previously restricted to 49%.

Under the new law, foreign investors are required to provide 10% of the investment in the mining sector. This is a significant move, as it allows foreign investors to hold 100% of the mining rights, which was previously restricted to 49%.

The SEC, under the 21st mining operation, with the ability to grant 10 to 150 million pesos annually, would also provide more than $1.4 million in interest-free loans to 100% of the mining rights. This is a significant move, as it allows foreign investors to hold 100% of the mining rights, which was previously restricted to 49%.

These projects will also contribute to the country's economic growth, particularly in the mining sector. This is a significant move, as it allows foreign investors to hold 100% of the mining rights, which was previously restricted to 49%.

In the Philippines, the mining sector is a key industry. This is a significant move, as it allows foreign investors to hold 100% of the mining rights, which was previously restricted to 49%.

Jose Miguel "Mig" de Ayala on Friday told the world's largest financial institution, the International Finance Corporation, that the Philippines must move to "keep the country on track" to achieve its goals.

de Ayala said that in 2001, the country's working-age population would constitute 61 percent of the population. He expected this figure to rise to 63.5 percent by 2010, 65.8 percent by 2015, and 67.5 percent by 2020.

This is "really different" to the situation of many developed nations that are not seeing the percentage of the elderly rising as fast.

"It means that demographic change is a demographic challenge for our country," Ayala said. "However, with such a demographic structure, our country has a chance to become a global leader in the future."

de Ayala said that the country's population, the economic structure, the labor force, and the infrastructure are all "emerging trends" that will shape the country's future.

The demographic transition will, in the long run, stimulate economic growth, which, combined with effective public policies, will lead to a better future.

The Philippines, however, is "the demographic dividend" is not one of the most promising trends.

The other trends on the path toward development and political reform, and the move to improve the quality of the labor force, will be the key to the country's future.

"There is a lot of work to be done in the country to ensure that the demographic dividend is not lost," de Ayala said.

Investments to fuel growth of Mindanao economy in '05

DAVAO CITY. Investments, including one that might have been overlooked, could fuel a record economic growth this year.

James Demos, chief of the Mindanao Free Trade and Development Council, told the business that improving ports and other conditions brought business confidence as well as investor interest in Mindanao, resulting in palpable economic gains for the country's third island.

"Looking at the various Mindanao development zones, there is so much optimism and confidence that Mindanao will sustain economic momentum and may even surpass economic growth recorded in the previous years," Demos said.

He said Mindanao was looking on some assets in the traditional industries industry especially in tea, banana and pineapple, which is ground for both domestic and export markets.

Demos likewise pointed the region is getting a portion of the investments pouring into the information technology sector.

Some state and private had already linked up operations in Cebu and General Santos, on top of CyberCity International net put up by U.S. and Cebu City.

Makoto Yano, chairman of the Japanese Philippine Economic Co-Op (JPEC), a Japanese-owned firm, is investing P3.5 billion in a new facility that will increase its bagged abaca production to 140,000 tons a year.

The investment project will replace PGC's existing plant in Jasaan, Misamis Oriental. Besides, a South Korean investor and development company, is also constructing a 50-room luxury hotel in Pacific Golf Estates in Cagayan de Oro City.

The hotel will be completed by the third quarter this year.

Mindanao attracted 33 new investments projects last year, creating almost 900 jobs, said JPEC's Demos.

These include projects of Breville Electronics Inc., in the northern region of the island, Philippine Division of Bionity Private, Inc. Inc., Angell Manufacturing Corp., Rayley & Airs Food Corp., Ciba-Geigy Ltd. and Global Trade Pacific Forest Inc.

Residential and commercial buildings are expected by 20.3 percent.

While Mindanao's foreign trade dropped in the last eight months of last year, the last quarter export figures were projected to level off with the export growth in 2000.

The local tourism sector has also showed some relief after rebounding from a slump. Some 65,717 incoming and outgoing air passengers were recorded in October last year, up 9.21 percent from the same period in 2000.

Also, Mindanao's cargo volume recorded a 5.45 percent hike as of third quarter last year, compared to the same period in 2000.

Neda calls for P1B more investments in tourism

By Michael V. Flores

THE PHILIPPINE Economic and Development Secretary has urged government to set aside at least P1 billion in investments to stimulate the tourism sector of the country's tourism industry.

Neda Secretary General Renato Aldeguer said the Philippines has a real sense of opportunity to participate in a post-9/11 tourism boom, as travelers from Europe and the United States are looking for alternative destinations following the attacks, thus diverting other parts of the region.

Neda said key destinations that will fuel tourism growth to include Cebu, Manila, Cagayan, Davao, Zamboanga, Angeles, Iloilo, Baguio, Boracay and Borneo.

He also said other tourist spots are under way, but he said, the tourism sector could still contribute a 10 percent growth to the country's gross domestic product (GDP) growth.

"It will be good to increase our tourism budget by P1 billion in 2001," he said. Now, we rely mostly on our local market, but we can achieve a lot more if we attract," he said.

The secretary's chief economic adviser suggested that the government for that liberate the country's tourism by opening up more flights.

He said the Philippines has a lot to offer to the tourism sector, but he said the tourism sector was downed by the economy, which fell to an estimated 200,000 and disrupted many economic activities.

Renato Villano, secretary from the Department of Education, said that the Philippines is tourism and was to highlight to health tourism.

Since the Philippines is already a source of health care, he said the country could market itself as a health care hub for foreigners that will attract the tourism sector.

"What happened to our neighboring country was unfortunate and it is a good thing that we should not be happy about. But while foreigners are looking for other destinations, the Philippines can very well be a tourist place for them," he said.

Tourist arrivals in the Philippines last year, 1.84 million as of mid-November last year, 24.6 percent more than the same period in the same period the previous year.

Although the figure significantly improved, the tourism industry contributed only a meager 3 percent to GDP.

RENEWED interest in the world market for coconut-based products opens a new horizon for the region's coconut farmers.

Prospects bright for coconut farmers in Eastern Visayas

PALEO, Leyte.—The Philippine Coconut Industry Development Program, its fourth year, has begun projects for the region's coconut farmers.

"This is a real boon to coconut farmers in the benefits of coconut oil, and other products derived from coconuts, to look for the local and world markets, according to Edilberto Norio, chief of the PCCI Eastern Visayas unit.

The region could provide a good portion of the coconut, the said, as coconut areas have still slowly produced more than due to their good weather last year.

"We expect 2001 to have a good harvest and no excessive damage to the coconut trees, but we will still need to be prepared," he said.

Norio said there was market demand for coconut in Japan, including oil and other products made from coconuts, from China, Korea and European countries, such as Germany.

"Our coconut farmers already signaled their interest and willingness to export their oil. The problem is we could not meet their demand, but with a projected high production, we could just lay their markets and ourselves for our coconut," he said.

Norio added, however, that Eastern Visayas was still in the "infancy stage of commercialization" of coconut products.

"We said there was a need to improve the quality of these coconut products to make them more competitive and attractive to the world market."

Eastern Visayas ranks third among the country's coconut-producing regions, with annual average of P17 million.

The region produces 1.6 million tons of coconut annually.

Be proud of yourself

SOME people find it easy to like themselves, while others have great difficulty. It's all about body-esteem—regarding how you see and accept your body.

In a survey of 1,000 women (aged 18-40), Dr. Anthony Comello and Ruth Stangor-Brown, Ph.D., assistant professors at Fairleigh Dickinson University in Rutherford, found that 60 percent of women who are obese have a negative body image, while 40 percent have a positive body image.

The survey found that 20 percent were happy about their bodies, 10 percent were sad, 25 percent were neutral, 40 percent were proud of their bodies, and 5 percent were not sure.

Form vs. function
Good looks and good feeling are people do not guarantee a good body image. He noted how many times he has seen women who are very fit and healthy, but who have a negative body image.

A woman's body is not just a piece of clothing. It is a part of her identity. The way she looks and feels about her body can affect her self-esteem and her ability to live a healthy life.

Is out-of-body experience simply a neurological disorder?

HOW does it feel to be out of your body? It's a question that has fascinated people for centuries.

My American friend, David McNeill, a well-known philosopher and professor at the University of California, San Diego, has written a book about this phenomenon.

The book, "Out of Body Experiences: A Philosophical Investigation," is a collection of essays that explore the nature of out-of-body experiences.

It is a book that is both interesting and thought-provoking. It is a book that is worth reading for anyone who is interested in the philosophy of mind.
